Special to the Chicago Tribune.

Augusta, Me., Aug. 18.—[Special.]—The attempt to fuse the Greenback and Democratic wing has fallen through in the Pine Tree State. The only Democratic paper in the State, the Greenback Gazetteer, in an editorial declares the situation and says it will be no party to such a scheme, but will adhere to and the ticket of its nominations. It is the intention now to put straight Greenback electors and county tickets in the field, and a convention has been called for that purpose. There is no hope of electing the candidates nominated, but the purpose is to let the Democracy know that it exists as an organization.

Judge [illegible] is hardly expected that Butler can be made to run there, although there has been a deputation to make overtures to him with the Democrats. It is said Butler has already sent agents to consult with the Democratic leaders, but one of the prominent Democrats says that Butler is not in accord with them in all matters of the party.

A South Carolina Congressman, who is in the city temporarily from that State, has been interviewing a number of Democratic Congressmen and leaders here, and says that the Democratic party of South Carolina will support Hampton and Lee, and that the Democrats there are confident of carrying the State by a majority of 50,000. He says that the Democrats have not been asked to support Butler, and that they will not do so. He says that the Democrats are not in favor of Butler, and that they will not support him. He says that the Democrats are not in favor of Butler, and that they will not support him.

A Washington dispatch says: "The Democratic Congressional Committee is not always to be found in a large number of Congressmen who brought to subscription members of the program of the campaign in their districts. Chairman Barnum has the hard labor of the committee to manage, a United States Congressman, D. C., said: 'Everything here is quiet and promising for Hancock and Union. The Democrats are enthusiastic. There are no defects among us. We are subject to the ordinary inconveniences here of hot-house weather.'

A letter from Chicago says: "We shall give Blaine and Logan a good majority. There are many ex-soldiers given to fun here, for our Republican candidates for various offices."

Mr. Pillsbury, Stevens County, Minn., says: "Blaine and Logan stock is good here. The Farm Party will operate on the same level. The opposition is divided and dying rapidly. A combination of independents, Anti-Monopolists, called it, arrayed for political ideas, according to its call in the early day. Having nothing to do with the Democratic party, it will be a party of its own. The Democrats are trying to get control of the Farmers' Alliance, but will fail. The Democrats are trying to get control of the Farmers' Alliance, but will fail."

Mr. Blaine left Bar Harbor this morning at half past 10. The first train he took was that of the Maine Central Railroad, which passes through the town of Mount Desert. Mr. Blaine was greeted by the Democratic and Republican leaders of Bangor, Democratic Mayor of Bangor, Democratic Mayor of Portland, and Democratic Mayor of Lewiston, who came to Bar Harbor to meet Mr. Blaine. The party left Bar Harbor at 10:30 a.m. and arrived at Augusta at 1:30 p.m. Mr. Blaine was met at the depot by a large crowd of people, who had assembled to welcome him. The party left Augusta at 2:30 p.m. and arrived at Bangor at 4:30 p.m. Mr. Blaine was met at the depot by a large crowd of people, who had assembled to welcome him. Ben Butler having gotten tired of waiting for Cleveland's letter of acceptance, which he refused to answer, has finally decided to answer with his address to Democrats of good faith, the main points of which are as follows:

1. Compliments.—In compliance with official and personal courtesies, I desire to express my appreciation of the political kindness with which I was charged. They were many.

2. Reasons to all accounting to accusations, opinions, and facts.

3. The preservation of the National legislative autonomy of the people, constitutionally vested in Congress.

4. The ability of all men and women who adhere to the declaration of equality, to the pursuit against the encroachments of those who object such common privilege.

5. The necessity for activity and correctness of opinion in governments, to that the products of the people should be open to light as possible; the great standing offenders to protect the rights of corporate citizens or those and plutocrats, to keep public servants subservient to the one and not of the people only so as to ensure the prosperity of the country with equal rights equal burdens, equal grants, and equal privileges of all people.

These views were quickly confirmed to me by the Democratic voters of Massachusetts, to whose assistance I was gratefully due for high commendation of my services, but to no Democratic representative whatever. They were to be presented to the National Democratic Convention for the amendment and adoption of the policies of Democracy and not of the two factions of Democrats who had organized their own conventions, and had nominated their own candidates for governor and others.

I had attended the Democratic State Convention, and had supported the regular ticket of the party, and had given my influence and vote to the election of the regular Democratic candidates, and I had been elected to the National Democratic Convention for the amendment and adoption of the policies of Democracy and not of the

The Friends of Michael Davitt Now Taking Him to Do Quarrel with Parnell.

English Votes Displeased with the Political Methods of a Fifteen-Day Boer.

Progress of the Boden-Zanzibar Cable Enterprise—The Chinese Boundary Peace and Claim.

[Special Cable to The Chicago Tribune.]

The Chicago Tribune's correspondent in Dublin has had an interview with Michael Davitt, the well-known Irish agitator, who has returned to Ireland after a long visit to the United States. Mr. Davitt is a member of the House of Commons, and is the author of the "New Departure" in Irish politics, which has for its object the union of all Irishmen, irrespective of religious belief, in the struggle for Home Rule. He is also the founder of the Land League, which has for its object the abolition of the landlord system in Ireland. Mr. Davitt's visit to America was made for the purpose of raising funds for the Irish cause, and he was successful in his mission. He is now in favor of the reunion of the Irish party, and is working to that end. He is opposed to the leadership of Mr. Parnell, and is in favor of the election of John Dillon as chairman of the party. Mr. Davitt is also in favor of a compromise with the Liberal party, by which the Irish members will support the Liberal candidate for the premiership in return for a promise of Home Rule. Mr. Davitt's views are not shared by the majority of the Irish members, and it is probable that he will withdraw from the political arena. He is now engaged in writing a history of the Land League movement, which will be published in book form in the near future.

[Special Cable to The Chicago Tribune.]

The Irish members of Parliament are very much displeased with the political methods of Mr. Davitt, and they are trying to reduce the importance of his visit to America. The English papers are also trying to belittle Mr. Davitt's visit. The latter seems to realize the situation, and has issued a statement in which he says that he has been misrepresented by the English press. He says that he has been misrepresented by the English press. He says that he has been misrepresented by the English press. He
